Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemes; I believe one of the exploits of the distinguished person t whom my friend Ashmus has alluded, is to make bels that are submitted to been he down and go to sleep. (Applause and laughter.) I hope sir, that my speech whatever other effect it may have, will not produce that.

Sir, it is perploxing, it is almost painful to conaider what high degree of intellectual and moral power is evinced by animals whom we protately call brute beasts. I suppose it was a reflection on the noble qualities of the berse, intellectual and word, that lef the wittiest, the hitterest, and I we serve to say, the fishiest of the entiriets ser language-I mean Dean Swift-in that re, arkable remance of his, the most facinating as he most revolting of books, to represent the horseunder that an pronounceable name which he gives m, as the wiser, the more sagedious, the nobler unional and to describe the homeo race, under the disgusting character of the Yabon, as an inferior der of beings. CHILDREN.

BY LONGFELLOW

Come to me, O. ye children! For I bear you at your play, And the questions that perplexed me Have vasished quite away.

Ye open the Eastern windows, That look towards the sun. Where thoughts are of singing swallows And the books of morning run

In your hearts are the birds and the sun-In your thoughts the brooklets flow.

But in mine is the wind of Autume, And the first fall of the snow. Ab ! what would the world be to us

Worse than the dark before. What the leaves are to the forest With light and air for food, Eretheir swest and tender juices Have been bardened into wood. -

If the children were no more?

We should dread the desert behind us

That to the world are children; Through them It feels the glow Of a ! righter and sunnier climate Than reaches the trunks below

Come to me, O, ve children ! And whisper in my car What the birds and the winds are singing In your sonny atmosphere.

For what are all our contrivings, And the wisdom of our books. When compared with your careece, And the gladness of your looks?

Ye are better than all the ballads That ever were sung or said ; For ye are living poems, And all the rest are dead.

BEGINS SEPTEMBER 11. 1800. MECHANICS, INVENTORS.

WANGFACTURES AN PARMEN. The Scientific American has now reached in Fourteenth Year and will enter upon a new tolune on the lith of September. It is the only workly and it has a very extensive circulation in all the States of the Union. It is not, as some might soppues from its title, a dry, abstruse work on al science : on the contrary, it so deals with the great events going on in the scientific, mechanical and industrial worlds, as to please and instruct every one. If the mechanic or Artisan wishes to know the best machine in use, or how to make any substance employed in his business - if the Hears wife wishes to get a receipe for making a good color, &c -if the laventor wishes to know what is torer wishes to keep posted with the times, and to employ the best facilities in his businessif the Man of Leisure and Study wishes to keep
